

In my opinion, there is no need to allow cell phone use on airplanes. Too often cell phone users are inconsiderate of people around them and what their personal preferences are. The aircraft cabin is a confined space where we all give up some personal freedom during the trip.

Certainly cell phone users can hold their thoughts until the plane lands and they return to an area that allows both them to talk and others to move away if they so desire.